Speaker Biographies

Madeleine K. Albright is Chair of Albright Stonebridge Group, a global strategy firm, and Chair of Albright Capital Management LLC, an investment advisory firm focused on emerging markets. She was the 64th Secretary of State of the United States. Dr. Albright received the Presidential Medal of Freedom, the nation's highest civilian honor, from President Obama on May 29, 2012. In 1997, Dr. Albright was named the first female Secretary of State and became, at that time, the highest-ranking woman in the history of the US government. From 1993 to 1997, Dr. Albright served as the US Permanent Representative to the United Nations and was a member of the President's Cabinet. She was a member of President Jimmy Carter's National Security Council and White House staff and served as Chief Legislative Assistant to US Senator Edmund S. Muskie.

Dr. Albright is a Professor in the Practice of Diplomacy at the Georgetown University School of Foreign Service. She chairs the National Democratic Institute for International Affairs and serves as president of the Truman Scholarship Foundation. Dr. Albright's latest book is Fascism: A Warning, a #1 New York Times bestseller published in April 2018. She is the author of five other New York Times bestsellers, including her autobiography, Madam Secretary: A Memoir (2003); Read My Pins: Stories from a Diplomat's Jewel Box (2009); and Prague Winter: A Personal Story of Remembrance and War, 1937-1948 (2012). Dr. Albright received a BA with Honors from Wellesley College, and master's and doctorate degrees from Columbia University's Department of Public Law and Government, as well as a Certificate from its Russian Institute.

Anthony Clark Arend is Professor of Government and Foreign Service at Georgetown University and Senior Adviser to the Dean. He served as Senior Associate Dean for Graduate and Faculty Affairs (later Vice Dean) in the Walsh School of Foreign Service from August 2015 until July 2018 and Director of the Master of Science in Foreign Service Program from 2008-2017. His research and teaching is in the fields of international law, national security law, international legal theory, and human rights. He has published seven books, including Legal Rules and International Society, International Law and the Use of Military Force (co-authored), and Human Dignity and the Future of Global Institutions (co-edited).

With Professor Christopher C. Joyner, he founded the Institute for International Law & Politics at Georgetown and served as co-director of the Institute from 2003-2008. He has also served as adjunct professor of law at the Georgetown University Law Center and is a Faculty Liaison to the Georgetown Institute for Politics and Public Service. He has also served as an Articles Editor for the Virginia Journal of International Law. Dr. Arend is a Life Member of the Council on Foreign Relations. In April 2017, Dr. Arend received the John Carroll Award from the Georgetown University Alumni Association. Dr. Arend received a PhD and an MA in foreign affairs from the Woodrow Wilson Department of Government and Foreign Affairs of the University of Virginia. He received a BSFS, magna cum laude, from the Edmund A. Walsh School of Foreign Service at Georgetown University.

Barbara K. Bodine is Distinguished Professor in the Practice of Diplomacy and concurrent Director of the Institute for the Study of Diplomacy at Georgetown University. Prior to joining Georgetown University's School of Foreign Service, she taught and directed policy task forces and policy workshops on US diplomacy in the Persian Gulf region for seven years at Princeton University's Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs and served as Director of the School's Scholars in the Nation's Service Initiative, a fellowship program for students pursuing careers in federal service. Ambassador Bodine's over 30 years in the US Foreign Service were spent primarily on Arabian Peninsula and greater Persian Gulf issues, specifically US bilateral and regional policy, strategic security issues, counterterrorism, and governance and reform.

Her tour as Ambassador to the Republic of Yemen, 1997-2001, saw enhanced support for democratization and increased security and counterterrorism cooperation. Ambassador Bodine also served in Baghdad as Deputy Principal Officer during the Iran-Iraq War, in Kuwait as Deputy Chief of Mission during the Iraqi invasion and occupation of 1990-1991, and again, seconded to the Department of Defense, in Iraq in 2003 as the senior State Department official and the first coalition coordinator for reconstruction in Baghdad and the central governorates. Ambassador Bodine is the recipient of a number of awards, including the Secretary's Award for Valor for her work in Occupied Kuwait and she is a member of The Council on Foreign Relations. Ambassador Ms. Bodine is a Phi Beta Kappa and magna cum laude graduate of the University of California, Santa Barbara in political science and East Asian studies and earned her master's at the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy.

Daniel Byman is a professor in the School of Foreign Service with a concurrent appointment with the Department of Government. He is also the Vice Dean for Undergraduate Affairs. He served as director of Georgetown's Security Studies Program and Center for Security Studies from 2005 until 2010. He leads a Georgetown team in teaching a "Massive Open Online Course" (MOOC) on terrorism and counterterrorism for EdX. Professor Byman is also a part-time Senior Fellow at the Center for Middle East Policy at the Brookings Institution. From 2002 to 2004 he served as a Professional Staff Member with the 9/11 Commission and with the Joint 9/11 Inquiry Staff of the House and Senate Intelligence Committees. Before joining the Inquiry Staff he was the Research Director of the Center for Middle East Public Policy at the RAND Corporation. Previous to this, Professor Byman worked as an analyst on the Middle East for the US government.

Professor Byman has written extensively on a range of topics related to terrorism, international security, civil and ethnic conflict, and the Middle East. He is the author of Al Qaeda, the Islamic State, and the Global Jihadist Movement: What Everyone Needs to Know (Oxford, 2015); A High Price: The Triumphs and Failures of Israeli Counterterrorism (Oxford, 2011); The Five Front War: The Better Way to Fight Global Jihad (Wiley, 2007); Deadly Connections: States that Sponsor Terrorism (Cambridge, 2005); Keeping the Peace: Lasting Solutions to Ethnic Conflict (Johns Hopkins, 2002); and co-author of Things Fall Apart: Containing the Spillover from the Iraqi Civil War (Brookings, 2007) and The Dynamics of Coercion: American Foreign Policy and the Limits of Military Might (Cambridge, 2002). He earned a BA from Amherst College and a PhD from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Charlie Cook is the Editor and Publisher of The Cook Political Report, and a political analyst for the National Journal Group. He is also a political analyst for NBC News. In 1984, Mr. Cook founded the independent, non-partisan Cook Political Report. Now with a staff of six, it is a publication that the New York Times once said was “a newsletter that both parties regard as authoritative” while CBS News’ Bob Schieffer called it “the bible of the political community.” Al Hunt in the Wall Street Journal has referred to Cook as “the Picasso of election analysis.” The late David Broder of The Washington Post, long considered “the Dean of the Washington press corp,” once wrote that Charlie Cook is “perhaps the best non-partisan tracker of Congressional races.” Mr. Cook has appeared on the ABC World News Tonight, the CBS Evening News, the NBC Nightly News, and on ABC’s This Week. Since the 1990s, he has also appeared on NBC’s Meet the Press over a dozen times. Over the years, he has served as an Election Night analyst for CBS, CNN, and, since 1996, on the NBC News Election Night Decision Desk in New York. In 2010, Mr. Cook was the co-recipient of the American Political Science Association’s prestigious Carey McWilliams Award to honor “a major journalistic contribution to our understanding of politics.” In 2013, he served as a Resident Fellow at the Institute of Politics at Harvard’s Kennedy School of Government.

Mo Elleithee is the founding Executive Director of Georgetown University’s Institute of Politics and Public Service, the first institute of its kind in the nation’s capital. Before launching the institute in 2015, he spent two decades as one of the top communications strategists in the Democratic Party, most recently as Communications Director and chief spokesman of the Democratic National Committee. A veteran of four presidential campaigns, Mr.

Elleithee was Senior Spokesman and Traveling Press Secretary on Hillary Clinton’s 2008 campaign. He served as a senior advisor and strategist for Senator Tim Kaine’s campaigns for Governor and US Senate, and has worked on numerous other statewide and local races in every region of the country. A frequent political commentator on television and radio, he was named a FOX News contributor in 2016. He was a founding partner of Hilltop Public Solutions, one of Washington’s leading political consulting and public affairs firms. He has been recognized on Washington Life Magazine’s “Power 100” list; as a “Top Influencer” by Campaigns & Elections Magazine; and was featured on Washingtonian Magazine’s “Guest List.” Mr. Elleithee earned his undergraduate degree from Georgetown’s School of Foreign Service, and an MA in political management from The George Washington University. He lives in Washington with his wife and two children, and can often be found at the Verizon Center (or on Twitter during the off-season) cheering on his beloved Hoya basketball team.

Elizabeth Ferris is Research Professor at Georgetown’s Institute for the Study of International Migration (ISIM) and a Non-resident Senior Fellow in Foreign Policy at the Brookings Institution. She joined ISIM in fall 2015 after serving for nine years as a Senior Fellow and Co-Director of the Brookings Project on Internal Displacement and as an adjunct professor in Georgetown’s School of Foreign Service. Prior to joining Brookings in November 2006, Elizabeth spent 20 years working in the field of international humanitarian response, most recently in Geneva, Switzerland at the World Council of Churches. She has also served as Chair of the International Council of Voluntary Agencies (ICVA), as Research Director for the Life and Peace Institute in Uppsala, Sweden, and as Director of the Church World Service Immigration and Refugee Program in New York. She has been a professor at several US universities and served as a Fulbright professor to the Universidad Autónoma de México in Mexico City. She has written or edited six books and many articles on humanitarian and human rights issues, which have been published in both academic and policy journals. Her current research interests focus on the politics of humanitarian action and on the role of civil society in protecting displaced populations. Dr. Ferris earned her BA in history from Duke University and PhD in international relations from the University of Florida.

Robert Gallucci is Distinguished Professor in the Practice of Diplomacy at Georgetown's Walsh School of Foreign Service. Ambassador Gallucci served as Dean of the School of Foreign Service for 13 years, until he left in July 2009 to become president of the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation. He was appointed Dean in 1996, after 21 years of distinguished service in a variety of government positions, focusing on international security. As Ambassador-at-Large and Special Envoy for the US Department of State, he dealt with the threats posed by the proliferation of ballistic missiles and weapons of mass destruction. He was chief US negotiator during the North Korean nuclear crisis of 1994, and served as Assistant Secretary of State for Political Military Affairs and as Deputy Executive Chairman of the UN Special Commission overseeing the disarmament of Iraq following the first Gulf War. During his tenure as Dean, he led in the creation of the School of Foreign Service in Qatar and oversaw the creation of the Program for Jewish Civilization and the Mortara Center for International Studies. Ambassador Gallucci earned his bachelor's degree at the State University of New York at Stony Brook and his master's and doctoral degrees at Brandeis University.

Joel Hellman became Dean of the Walsh School of Foreign Service at Georgetown University in July 2015 after 25 years working on some of the most complex issues of governance, conflict, and the political economy of development as both a scholar and practitioner. He served at the World Bank in many senior roles including Chief Institutional Economist; and as Director of the Center for Conflict, Security and Development in Nairobi, Kenya, where he led the Bank's engagement with the most challenging fragile and conflict-affected states around the world; and as Coordinator of the Bank's response in Indonesia after the devastating Asian tsunami. He was the Senior Political Counselor at the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development in London, leading its political engagement and analysis on Russia, Central Asia, and Eastern Europe. As a political science professor at Harvard University and Columbia University, Dr. Hellman focused on the politics of economic reform. His numerous publications include "Governance Gone Local: does Decentralization Improve Accountability" with Jose Edgardo Campos (2005). Born and raised in Brooklyn, New York, he is a graduate of Williams College, where he majored in area studies. He has a PhD in political science from Columbia University and an MPhil from the University of Oxford in Russian and East European Studies.

Sean Kanuck is Director of Cyber, Space and Future Conflict at the International Institute for Strategic Studies (IISS). He leads the Institute's Cyber, Space and Future Conflict Program, assessing advanced technologies and forecasting the evolution of strategic risk. He contributes to IISS publications, convenes para-diplomatic events, and provides consultancy. His expertise is in information technology, telecommunications, and Internet governance; global strategy and conflict in cyberspace and outer space; public international law (specializing in the law of armed conflict), and intelligence and national security analysis. Mr. Kanuck joined the IISS in 2017. Prior to this, he served five years as the first US National Intelligence Officer for Cyber Issues at the Office of the Director of National Intelligence. He also has a decade of government experience in the Central Intelligence Agency's Information Operations Center, as an Intelligence Fellow at the White House, and as part of the US delegation to the United Nations Group of Governmental Experts on international information security. He has held numerous distinguished positions internationally, such as the Chair of the Research Advisory Group for the Global Commission on the Stability of Cyberspace, a Distinguished Visiting Fellow at the Rajaratnam School of International Studies in Singapore, and a Distinguished Fellow at the Observer Research Foundation in India. He holds postgraduate degrees from Harvard Law School, the London School of Economics (international relations), and the University of Oslo (public international law).

Rebecca Katz is an Associate Professor and Director of the Center for Global Health Science and Security at Georgetown University. Prior to coming to Georgetown, she spent ten years at The George Washington University as faculty in the Milken Institute School of Public Health. Her research and writing has focused on global health security, public health preparedness, and health diplomacy. Since 2007, much of her work has been on the domestic and global implementation of the International Health Regulations. Since 2004, Dr. Katz has been a consultant to the Department of State, working on issues related to the Biological Weapons Convention, pandemic influenza, and disease surveillance. Her areas of expertise include global health security policy, international health regulations, pandemic preparedness, the Biological Weapons Convention, health diplomacy, and innovative financing for health. Dr. Katz received her undergraduate degree from Swarthmore College, an MPH from Yale University, and a PhD from Princeton University.

Peter F. Krogh is the president of the Seal Abatement Coalition headquartered on Nantucket Island, where he resides. Previously, he was, for 15 years, Distinguished Professor of International Affairs at the Walsh School of Foreign Service at Georgetown University, and, prior to that, Dean of the Walsh School of Foreign Service for 25 years. He is Dean Emeritus of the School of Foreign Service. He has been honored by the governments of Austria and Germany, and by Georgetown University with an honorary degree, the President's Medal, and an endowed chair in his name. The honors program of the Walsh School of Foreign Service also bears his name. While at Georgetown, Dr. Krogh moderated 225 PBS television programs on foreign affairs that are now catalogued in the Dean Peter Krogh Digital Foreign Affairs Archives in the university's library. Dr. Krogh served on the board of the Carlisle Companies and on the boards of multiple foreign affairs organizations. He has published numerous articles on American foreign policy and diplomacy and is the author of From the Dean's Chair: A Decade of Reflections on World Affairs. Dr. Krogh received his BA cum laude in economics from Harvard University, and his master's and PhD degrees at the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy at Tufts University.

Helen McNeill has been the consultant to the Georgetown Leadership Seminar since 2000. She also consults for other academic programs and international groups. From 1992 until 1999, she worked for the National Trust for Historic Preservation as the International Affairs Program Director at the Woodrow Wilson House and has also held posts at the Meridian International Center, the Environmental Film Festival, and at the Washington National Cathedral. She holds a B.A. from Rosemont College and an M.A. from the University of Pennsylvania, and studied at the University of Vienna.

Irfan Nooruddin is the Hamad bin Khalifa Al Thani Professor of Indian Politics and the Faculty Chair of the Walsh School of Foreign Service at Georgetown. He directs the Georgetown University India Initiative, a university-wide initiative that advances research and teaching around India and its role in world affairs and creates a platform for high-level dialogue among American and Indian leaders from government, business, civil society, and the academy. He is the author of Elections in Hard Times: Building Stronger Democracies in the 21st Century (Cambridge, 2016, with T.E. Flores) and Coalition Politics and Economic Development: Credibility and the Strength of Weak Governments (Cambridge, 2011). Dr. Nooruddin specializes in economic development and policymaking, democratization and democratic institutions, and international institutions. He has been a Fellow at the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars in Washington, DC, and is a Team Member with Lokniti: Programme on Comparative Democracy at the Centre for the Study of Developing Societies, New Delhi. From 2003-2014, Dr. Nooruddin was Assistant Professor and Associate Professor in the Department of Political Science at The Ohio State University. He earned a BA from Ohio Wesleyan University and an MA and PhD from the University of Michigan.

Catherine A. Novelli is a Centennial Fellow at Georgetown University's Walsh School of Foreign Service and serves as President of Listening for America, a non-partisan, non-profit organization dedicated to forging a new vision of US international trade engagement. She has worked in the field of international trade policy for over 30 years and has served every US president from Ronald Reagan to Barack Obama. Most recently, she was Under Secretary of State for Economic Growth, Energy, and the Environment, reporting directly to the Secretary of State. Prior to assuming her duties as Under Secretary of State, she spent seven years as Vice President, Worldwide Government Affairs at Apple Inc. Prior to her time at Apple, Ms. Novelli was a partner in the law firm of Mayer Brown International, where she provided legal and policy advice to Fortune 100 companies.

As Assistant US Trade Representative for Europe and the Mediterranean, Ms. Novelli coordinated US trade and investment policy for the over 65 countries of Western Europe, Central Europe, Russia, Central Asia, the Middle East, and North Africa. She has taken a leading role in many of the most important US trade negotiations in Europe, Russia, the Middle East, and North Africa, including serving as lead negotiator for the United States Free Trade Agreements with Jordan, Morocco, Bahrain, and Oman. Ms. Novelli is a graduate of Tufts University, and holds a law degree from the University of Michigan and a Master of Laws from the University of London (with concentrations in international and comparative law at the London School of Economics and SOAS).

Thomas R. Pickering is Chairman of the Board of the Institute for the Study of Diplomacy at Georgetown University's School of Foreign Service. He holds the personal rank of Career Ambassador, the highest rank in the US Foreign Service. In a diplomatic career spanning five decades, he was US Ambassador to the Russian Federation, India, Israel, El Salvador, Nigeria, and the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan. From 1989 to 1992 he was Ambassador and US Representative to the United Nations in New York. He also served as Assistant Secretary of State for the Bureau of Oceans, Environmental and Scientific Affairs; Executive Secretary of the Department of State; and Special Assistant to Secretaries of State William P. Rogers and Henry A. Kissinger. His last assignment with the Department of State was as Under Secretary of State for Political Affairs from 1997 to 2000. Upon leaving government, Ambassador Pickering served as Senior Vice President for International Relations and a member of the Executive Council of the Boeing Company. He is currently Vice Chairman at Hills and Company, which provides advice and counsel to a number of major US enterprises. Pickering received his bachelor's degree with high honors in history from Bowdoin College and his master's from the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy. Institute for the Study of Diplomacy

Founded in 1978, the Institute for the Study of Diplomacy, an integral part of the Walsh School of Foreign Service at Georgetown University, brings together diplomats, other practitioners, scholars, and students to explore global challenges and evolving demands of diplomatic statecraft, to better understand the nexus of theory and practice, and to enhance and expand an appreciation of the role of diplomacy as a critical tool in national policy.
